Two Members Retire from our Board

Having served long and well, they shared their sound judgment and experience in the practice of medicine in Memphis with all of us.

A founder and original board member of MetroCare Physicians, Robert Riley Jones, MD is retiring from our board of directors after 40 years of service. One of the visionaries who established MetroCare in 1983, Dr. Jones over these many years has provided MetroCare with the wisdom of his experience in the practice of medicine as an accomplished and trusted orthopedic surgeon. We are grateful to Dr. Jones for his commitment to raising the quality of the practice of medicine in Memphis, both for patients and physicians.

A longtime member of MetroCare, we honor James Ensor, MD upon his retirement from the board. Dr. Ensor contributed time serving on the credentials committee for several years, and in his capacity as a doctor of internal medicine, he was an active and valuable primary care participant in our Clinically Integrated Network. We thank Dr. Ensor for his years of service to MetroCare.
